ALUMNI NEWS:

Tom Augustine ('55) writes from Gold Canyon, AZ, "My only news is that I'm still alive and kicking at age 82. My wife passed away three years ago. I live alone near my daughter and her family. 'Took my daughters to Chicago last summer. They wanted to see where their father grew up and went to school, so we visited the old Austin High site. They couldn't believe how big the campus was, and that there were approximately 5,000 students. 'Had a wonderful visit.'"

Marshall Levin ('55) writes that he has been married to Lois for 60 years, and they have two daughters and five outstanding grandchildren. Marsh is still working part time at the Home Depot in Evanston, and is looking forward to the upcoming reunion.

MILESTONES:

500 years ago, on May 2, 1519, Leonard da Vinci died. Leonard was an insatiable learner. He was able to give the Mona Lisa that mysterious look on her face because he had studied all the muscles involved in smiling. By examining his surroundings so closely, he was able to develop new techniques that advanced his field and portrayed the world in a way no one had ever seen before. [Bill Gates – TIME February 18-25, 2019]

250 years ago, on May 1, 1769, Arthur Wellesley, 1st Duke of Wellington, (the Iron Duke), was born in Dublin, Ireland. Commander of the British army during the Napoleonic Wars and later prime minister of Great Britain (1828–30), he first rose to military prominence in India, won successes in the Peninsular War in Spain (1808–14), and shared in the victory over Napoleon at the Battle of Waterloo (1815). Not only did he vanquish Napoleon, twice become prime minister and lend his name to the Wellington boot, he gave us Beef Wellington to remember him by, too. This indulgent dish of beef, slathered with a mushroom and/or foie gras mixture, given a kick by Madeira and baked in pastry, was – depending on which old wives' tale you're listening to – the Duke's favored fuel for fighting the French, a dish created to commemorate his victory at the Battle of Waterloo or named because of its resemblance to his beloved Wellington boots (presumably, this last theory depends on the cook in question being outstandingly awful). [The Telegraph]

150 Years Ago, on April 6, 1869, Governor of New York, John Thompson Hoffman signed a bill officially creating the American Museum of Natural History. Before construction of the present complex, the museum was housed in the Arsenal building in Central Park. Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., the father of the 26th U.S. President, was one of the founders, along with several other prominent citizens of the time. The founding of the museum realized the dream of naturalist Dr. Albert S. Bickmore, a one-time student of zoologist Louis Agassiz, who lobbied tirelessly for years for the establishment of a natural history museum in New York.

100 Years Ago, in 1919, a group of Oak Park women decided to open the Economy Shop to raise funds for five local charitable organizations. Today, Economy Shop continues to be an important resource for local charities. Oak Park River Forest (OPRF) Museum and Economy Shop will celebrate its 100th Anniversary with a new exhibit, "Economy Shop at 100: Donations Through the Decades, Shopping Through the Century." The special exhibit will run through May 2019 at OPRF Museum.

100 Years Ago, on January 31, 1919, Jackie Robinson, who broke the major league baseball color barrier with the Brooklyn Dodgers on April 15, 1947, was born.

100 Years Ago, on February 26, 1919, President Woodrow Wilson designated Grand Canyon as the 15th national park. During its first year of operation, the park welcomed fewer than 38,000 people. More than 6.4 million people visited Grand Canyon in 2018. [Las Vegas Review-Journal 2-25-19]

100 Years Ago, Junior Achievement (JA) was started in 1919 in Springfield, Massachusetts by Strathmore Paper Founder Horace Moses, AT&T Chairman Theodore Vail and U.S. Senator from Massachusetts Murray Crane in response to families moving from farms to the growing industrial cities. The goal was to provide young people with the skills they would need to be successful adults in their new communities, and has evolved from an organization operating primarily in the Northeastern United States and teaching teens how to start a business into a multinational organization reaching more than 10 million students in 100 countries with programs that promote entrepreneurship, career and work readiness and financial literacy. In the United States, JA reaches nearly 5 million students in grades K-12.

100 Years Ago, the Bauhaus, the immensely influential art and design school, was founded by Walter Gropius in Weimar, Germany, in April 1919. Though the school was only in existence for a total of 14 years, it engaged some of the biggest names in 20th-century art and design—Mies van der Rohe, Marcel Breuer, Gunta Stölzl, Josef and Anni Albers, to name a few—and set in motion visions of modernism that have echoed across disciplines and decades.

100 Years Ago, Easterseals was founded on April 22, 1919, by Ohio businessman Edgar Allen. Allen was inspired to make a difference in the lives of children with disabilities after losing his own son in a streetcar accident in 1907. The lack of adequate medical services available to save his son prompted Allen to sell his business and begin a fund-raising campaign to build a hospital in his hometown of Elyria, Ohio. Allen was surprised to learn that children with disabilities were often hidden from public view. Inspired to make a difference, Allen founded the National Society for Crippled Children, the first organization of its kind. In the spring of 1934, the organization launched its first Easter "seals" campaign to raise money for its services. Cleveland Plain Dealer cartoonist J.H. Donahey designed the first seal. Donahey based the design on a concept of simplicity because those served by the charity asked "simply for the right to live a normal life." The lily - a symbol of spring - was officially incorporated as the National Society for Crippled Children's logo in 1952 for its association with new life and new beginnings.

100 Years Ago, Betty Ballantine (Elizabeth Norah Jones) was born on September 25, 1919 in India to a colonial family. She moved with her family to Jersey in the Channel Islands, where she met Ian Ballantine in 1938. By New Year's, they were engaged and in June 1939 were married and on their way to New York. Using a $500 wedding gift from Betty's father, the Ballantines started out as importers of Penguin paperbacks from England, and founded two enduring imprints: Bantam Books and Ballantine Books, becoming the first house to publish hardcover and paperback lines at the same time, and offering unusually generous royalties. They began publishing original Science Fiction (SF) in 1953, and became the world's premier SF publisher. The Ballantines were honored with two special professional World Fantasy Awards in 1975 and 1984, a special SFWA Award in 1985, and the Literary Marketplace Lifetime Achievement Award in 2007. The Ballantines were inducted in the Science Fiction Hall of Fame in 2008. Betty Ballantine, 99, died on February 12, 2019 at home in Bearsville, NY. She was predeceased by Ian in 1995.

100 Years Ago, Nat "King" Cole was born on March 17, 1919, and died of lung cancer at age 45 on February 15, 1965. Known for his smooth and well-articulated vocal style, Cole actually started out as a piano man. He first learned to play around the age of four with help from his mother, a church choir director. The son of a Baptist pastor, Cole may have started out playing religious music, but he also had classical piano training. He organized the King Cole Trio in the early '40s and made television history in 1956 when he became the first African-American performer to host a variety TV series. He also appeared in several movies. See more about this multi-talented artist who left us too soon at <https://www.biography.com/musician/nat-king-cole>.

60 Years Ago: On March 9, 1959, Barbie appeared at the American Toy Fair in New York City. Since then, she has held 20-plus jobs (including surgeon, game developer, and CEO). [Parade 3-24-19]

30 Years Ago, on April 21, 1989, the movie Field of Dreams, based on W.P. Kinsella's novel "Shoeless Joe," opened. This fantasy-drama sports film was nominated for three Academy Awards, and in 2017 was selected for preservation in the United States National Film Registry. [Wikipedia]

MOTHER'S DAY: A woman named Ann Reeves Jarvis decided to start a "Mother's Friendship Day" to promote reconciliation after the Civil War. Her daughter, Anna Jarvis, decided to honor her own mother with a holiday. This Anna Jarvis never even had children, and as she grew older, she regretted inventing the holiday and vehemently denounced its eventual commercialization. She shunned the practice of purchasing gifts and urged others to avoid doing so as well. Despite her efforts, the holiday is still celebrated with great gusto with flowers, cards, candies, and more. In 1914, President Woodrow Wilson officially recognized Mother's Day as the second Sunday in May. A day to honor mothers was nothing new, as such celebrations date back thousands of years to the ancient Greeks and Romans. [Wikipedia]

DRURY LANE'S MAMMA MIA WAS A SMASH!

You might think you've seen and heard enough of Mamma Mia and the score by Abba, but the production attended by 63 of our classmates, friends, and family on April 10 was in a class by itself. This writer broke up at the sight of the male cast members performing a dance in SWIM FINS! Before the show, we enjoyed a delicious meal in the beautiful English Room, which was decorated in old English style with beautiful portraits and a burgundy color scheme. Watch future newsletters for the next play date.

MARCH WAS NATIONAL PEANUT MONTH:

- Africans introduced the Americans to peanuts in the early 1700s.
- Although the earliest creation of peanut butter can be traced back to the Ancient Incas and Aztecs, modern peanut butter wasn't officially invented until 1895, when Dr. John Harvey Kellogg of cereal fame patented the process, using raw peanuts.
- Peanut allergies are one of the most common allergies around the world, and they can be fatal.
- More than 3 million people in the US alone suffer from depression and related mental illnesses. Peanuts contain tryptophan, which aids the release of serotonin, a mood-enhancing hormone. The next time you are feeling low, try munching on some roasted peanuts.
- Despite the name, peanuts aren't nuts at all. They, in fact, belong to the legume family, and grow underground.
- Peanuts are Georgia's official state crop, and the state boasts the largest share of peanut production in the U.S.
- The first Peanut Week was observed in 1941, thus promoting this fantastic legume.
- Peanut Week was extended to a whole month in 1974 and celebrated every year, hence.

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER:

Francis Scott Key (1779-1843), a 35-year-old lawyer and amateur poet who had witnessed the bombardment of Fort McHenry by ships of the British Royal Navy during the Battle of Baltimore in the War of 1812, had written the lyrics in a poem in 1814 during the British siege in Baltimore Harbor. Key was inspired by the large American flag, the Star-Spangled Banner, flying above the fort before the American victory.

On March 3, 1931, President Herbert Hoover signed a bill designating "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the official national anthem of the United States. The anthem had been recognized for official use by the United States Navy in 1889, and by President Woodrow Wilson in 1916. On April 15, 1929, Rep. John Linthicum (D-Md.) (1867-1932) introduced legislation that would make the song the national anthem. Although the House approved the bill on April 21, 1930, the measure drew its share of critics. Detractors claimed that Linthicum, whose district encompassed parts of Baltimore, was eager to promote the city's history more than he was in furthering patriotism. Moreover, they noted that the old British drinking song — with its challenging range of 19 semitones — to which Key's words were attached remained ill-suited to the vocal range of many Americans. Nevertheless, as one of the final acts of the about-to-expire Congress, the Senate also approved the House bill. Even after the anthem legislation had been enacted, some newspaper editorials continued to raise questions about the need for such a statute. [SOURCE: HISTORY.HOUSE.GOV]

THANK YOU, CHUCK MEYER - DATABASE ADMINISTRATOR/WEBMASTER EMERITUS!!

In August 2004, Chuck Meyer contacted six Chicago area Class of 1955 alums to plan for their 50th reunion. These seven met at an Arlington Heights hotel and formed the nucleus of the Austin Class of 1955 Reunion Committee. Other members joined the group shortly thereafter.

Chuck came to Austin from Nash elementary school, and became involved in the Architecture Club, Dance Committee, Ushering (Chief Usher Main Floor), Movie Projection, Physics & Chemistry, Stamp & Coin Club, Hi Y, and Junior Achievement.

Austin habits get well-entrenched. Where he was a projector boy for Mrs. Freeman and an usher for Mr. Cole, he now does AV for his senior complex and ushers for the Minnesota Orchestra.

After graduation, he attended classes at U of I at Navy Pier where he was also on the Dance Committee (call him "Twinkletoes"). He then moved to U of I at Champaign, where he was in ROTC and Flying class. In 1959, someone came to the campus and recruited students to join the UN Association of Great Britain to build houses in Austria for German refugees from Yugoslavia. Chuck became one of 60 students to go work for half the summer, making the bricks and building houses. He then biked and toured around Europe for the other half of the summer. In his typical inquisitive nature, he went to Yugoslavia and East Berlin. The Air Force then held up his commission until they investigated this. In the interim, Chuck became a taxi driver in Chicago and really learned the ins and outs of the city. Then he did a stint as a chauffeur for a black organist around the Midwest. The recent movie, Green Book, had significant meaning for Chuck. Even in the Midwest, he had similar experiences!

He joined the US Air Force and achieved the rank of Captain. He piloted a C124 Globemaster transport plane and flew to many unusual places, and took advantage of sightseeing wherever he went. One of Chuck's goals was to ride all the subways in the world. He hasn't quite made it yet.

In 1999, he and Peg, whom he met while stationed in Dover, Delaware, and married in 1965, went back to the town in Austria where Chuck had worked. What had been called a camp was now a well-established town. The homes were well cared for and even had additions on some of them. The many original owners who still lived there were very excited that a worker had returned. The local Austrian newspaper did a full-page article on Chuck.

In 1966, Chuck traded in his Air Force blue uniform for an IBM blue suit. His title was Systems Engineer, supporting customer needs and writing programs, as well as teaching, first in New York City and then in Minneapolis. He took early retirement and worked ten more years as a consultant, but his retirement wasn't really retirement, because he became totally invested in Austin High School. Having attended earlier reunions that didn't seem very well-attended, given the size of the class, he spent many hours tracking down classmates. Peggy's class in New Jersey had many more attendees at their 40th reunion than Austin had at its 40th, so Chuck was determined to locate more Austin classmates, which he did with the help of several other committee members.

Chuck designed and implemented both a website AND a comprehensive database, that are still functioning 15 years later. Jim Padar ('56) had taken over the website maintenance early on, and his son Chris is now watching over it, due to Jim's passing last year. Chuck's Parkinson's made it necessary to turn over the maintenance of the database to Art Fumarolo, but Chuck continues to watch over it and suggest improvements.

Chuck, there is no way we can repay you for all your hard work and tender loving care over the years. And this writer gratefully acknowledges Peggy's invaluable proof-reading. She has saved me from many embarrassments. We thank you both and hope you will continue to keep an eye on things for many years to come.

"Ideas are like rabbits. You get a couple and learn how to handle them, and pretty soon you have a dozen."
[John Steinbeck (February 27, 1902)]

APPLE SEED POISON: Be careful the next time you're munching on an apple, as their seeds contain cyanide! We're not saying Mother Nature is out to get you, but the deadly poison is naturally present in all sorts of foods we eat, like peaches, apricots, barley, and more. The poison is evolution's way of dissuading animals from eating the plants. Don't give up your apple a day, however, as even if a seed is swallowed, most pass through the body undigested. U.S. food-borne cyanide poisonings are not common, thanks to strict food processing guidelines. [Trivia Genius]
